October Is Cyber Security Month!

You may have heard of terms such as virus, Trojan, ransomware, or rootkit when people discuss cyber security. All of these words describe the same thing: programs used by cyber attackers to infect computers and devices. A common term used to describe all these different programs is the word malware. Simply put, malware is software—a computer program—used to perform malicious actions. In fact, the term malware is a combination of the words malicious and software. Learn More
